

Keyboard plugin for automated business replies

As AI software sophisticates, we're seeing platforms using it to assist businesses communication, such as an empathetic algorithm that help users choose a suitable email tone. KeyReply knows the stress of agonizing over a client email, so their software enables businesses to create a suite of contextual messages for rapid, coordinated responses via a keyboard plugin.

The platform helps businesses build a database of replies for a variety of communications, covering follow-up emails, invite requests and other enquiries. These templates are then accessed via a keyboard plugin, all of which can be restricted to enable selective employee access. Users can then efficiently keep up with communications when away from their desks, all while maintaining the up-to-date tone of the company. Businesses can subscribe for USD 5 per user per month, with more sophisticated packages offering AI assisted content creation.

Could this software enhance with the work of PR teams?
